SCOTTISH CONSTRUCTION FORUM

MAKING SCOTTISH CONSTRUCTION WORK

Marriott Hotel, Glasgow. Monday 9th November 2009

MAKING SCOTTISH CONSTRUCTION WORK

The Scottish construction industry has suffered during the recession, but we are nothing if not resilient and as the UK starts to see signs of recovery, we must start planning for the future. The theme “Making Scottish Construction Work” looks ahead with a positive vision for the next few crucial years for our industry, which is so important for the economic wellbeing of Scotland.

Glasgow has been at the forefront of commercial activity in Scotland, and we will hear from the Leader of the Council and one of the City’s Executive Directors on Glasgow’s plans for the years ahead. The Commonwealth Games infrastructure is already taking shape, and we will also hear from the Chief Executive of the Games 2014 Company of its plans for this significant construction project.

Health & Safety is key to the industry’s success, and a Director of the Health & Safety Executive will give us a cautionary insight from London 2012. The Infrastructure Development Plans for Scotland will be presented by Transport Scotland, and we will have a Vision for the Future from one of Scotland’s major construction employers.

This industry values the partnership we have with the Scottish Government, which is our biggest single customer. The conference will close with an address from a Government Minister on what the future holds in terms of climate change and all that it means for our industry.

The Forum wants Scottish construction businesses to attend and share with us the emerging view of the future of this vital sector as it rebuilds for the long term.
